

01 OVERVIEW

The Year-End Care Package

Designing a multi-channel campaign for Growfin's year-end webinar: landing page, ad campaign, and blog design.

Year-end doesn't have to feel like a crisis. Show people you understand the chaos before you ask for their time.

CLIENT

Growfin

ROLE

Campaign & Visual Design

SCOPE

Landing Page, Ad System, Blog

COLLABORATORS

Benji • Meganathan

02 CONTEXT

A real customer story, built to drive real registrations.

THE BRIEF

Growfin needed to drive registrations for a live webinar built around a real customer story. Kelly-Anne Kratz, Senior AR Manager at Greenhouse, sharing how her team manages $250M in collections at year-end. Marketing developed the core concept, the Year-End Care Package, built around acknowledging a specific, painful moment AR and collections professionals go through every December, rather than pitching the product outright.

DESIGN'S ROLE

The concept was already set by marketing. Design's job was to bring that idea to life across every touchpoint someone might encounter it: the landing page they register on, the ads that reach them in the first place, and the blog post that carries the payoff after they sign up.

03 THE CONCEPT

Relief, not another product pitch.

The Year-End Care Package: anyone who registers for the webinar gets a bundle built around the idea of relief rather than another sales pitch. It includes a Spotify playlist called the Survival Playlist, Collector's Edition, where every track title carries a wry finance or money connection (Rihanna's "Better Have My Money," Destiny's Child's "Bills, Bills, Bills"), a blog post laid out as a three-week survival playbook, and a shark plushie tying back to Growfin's Fin mascot.

The whole package reframes the webinar from "come learn about our product" to "we see what you're dealing with right now, here's something for you."

04 THE APPROACH

One idea, carried across three touchpoints.

01 Landing Page

Designed the webinar landing page, with Benji guiding the visual direction and developer Meganathan handling the build.

02 Ad Campaign

The full ad system driving traffic to the landing page, designed independently: from early pain-point concepts through the final "2025 AR Wrapped" direction that shipped.

03 Blog Design

The blog banner and supporting collateral for the year-end playbook post, designed independently to carry the same visual language as the rest of the funnel.

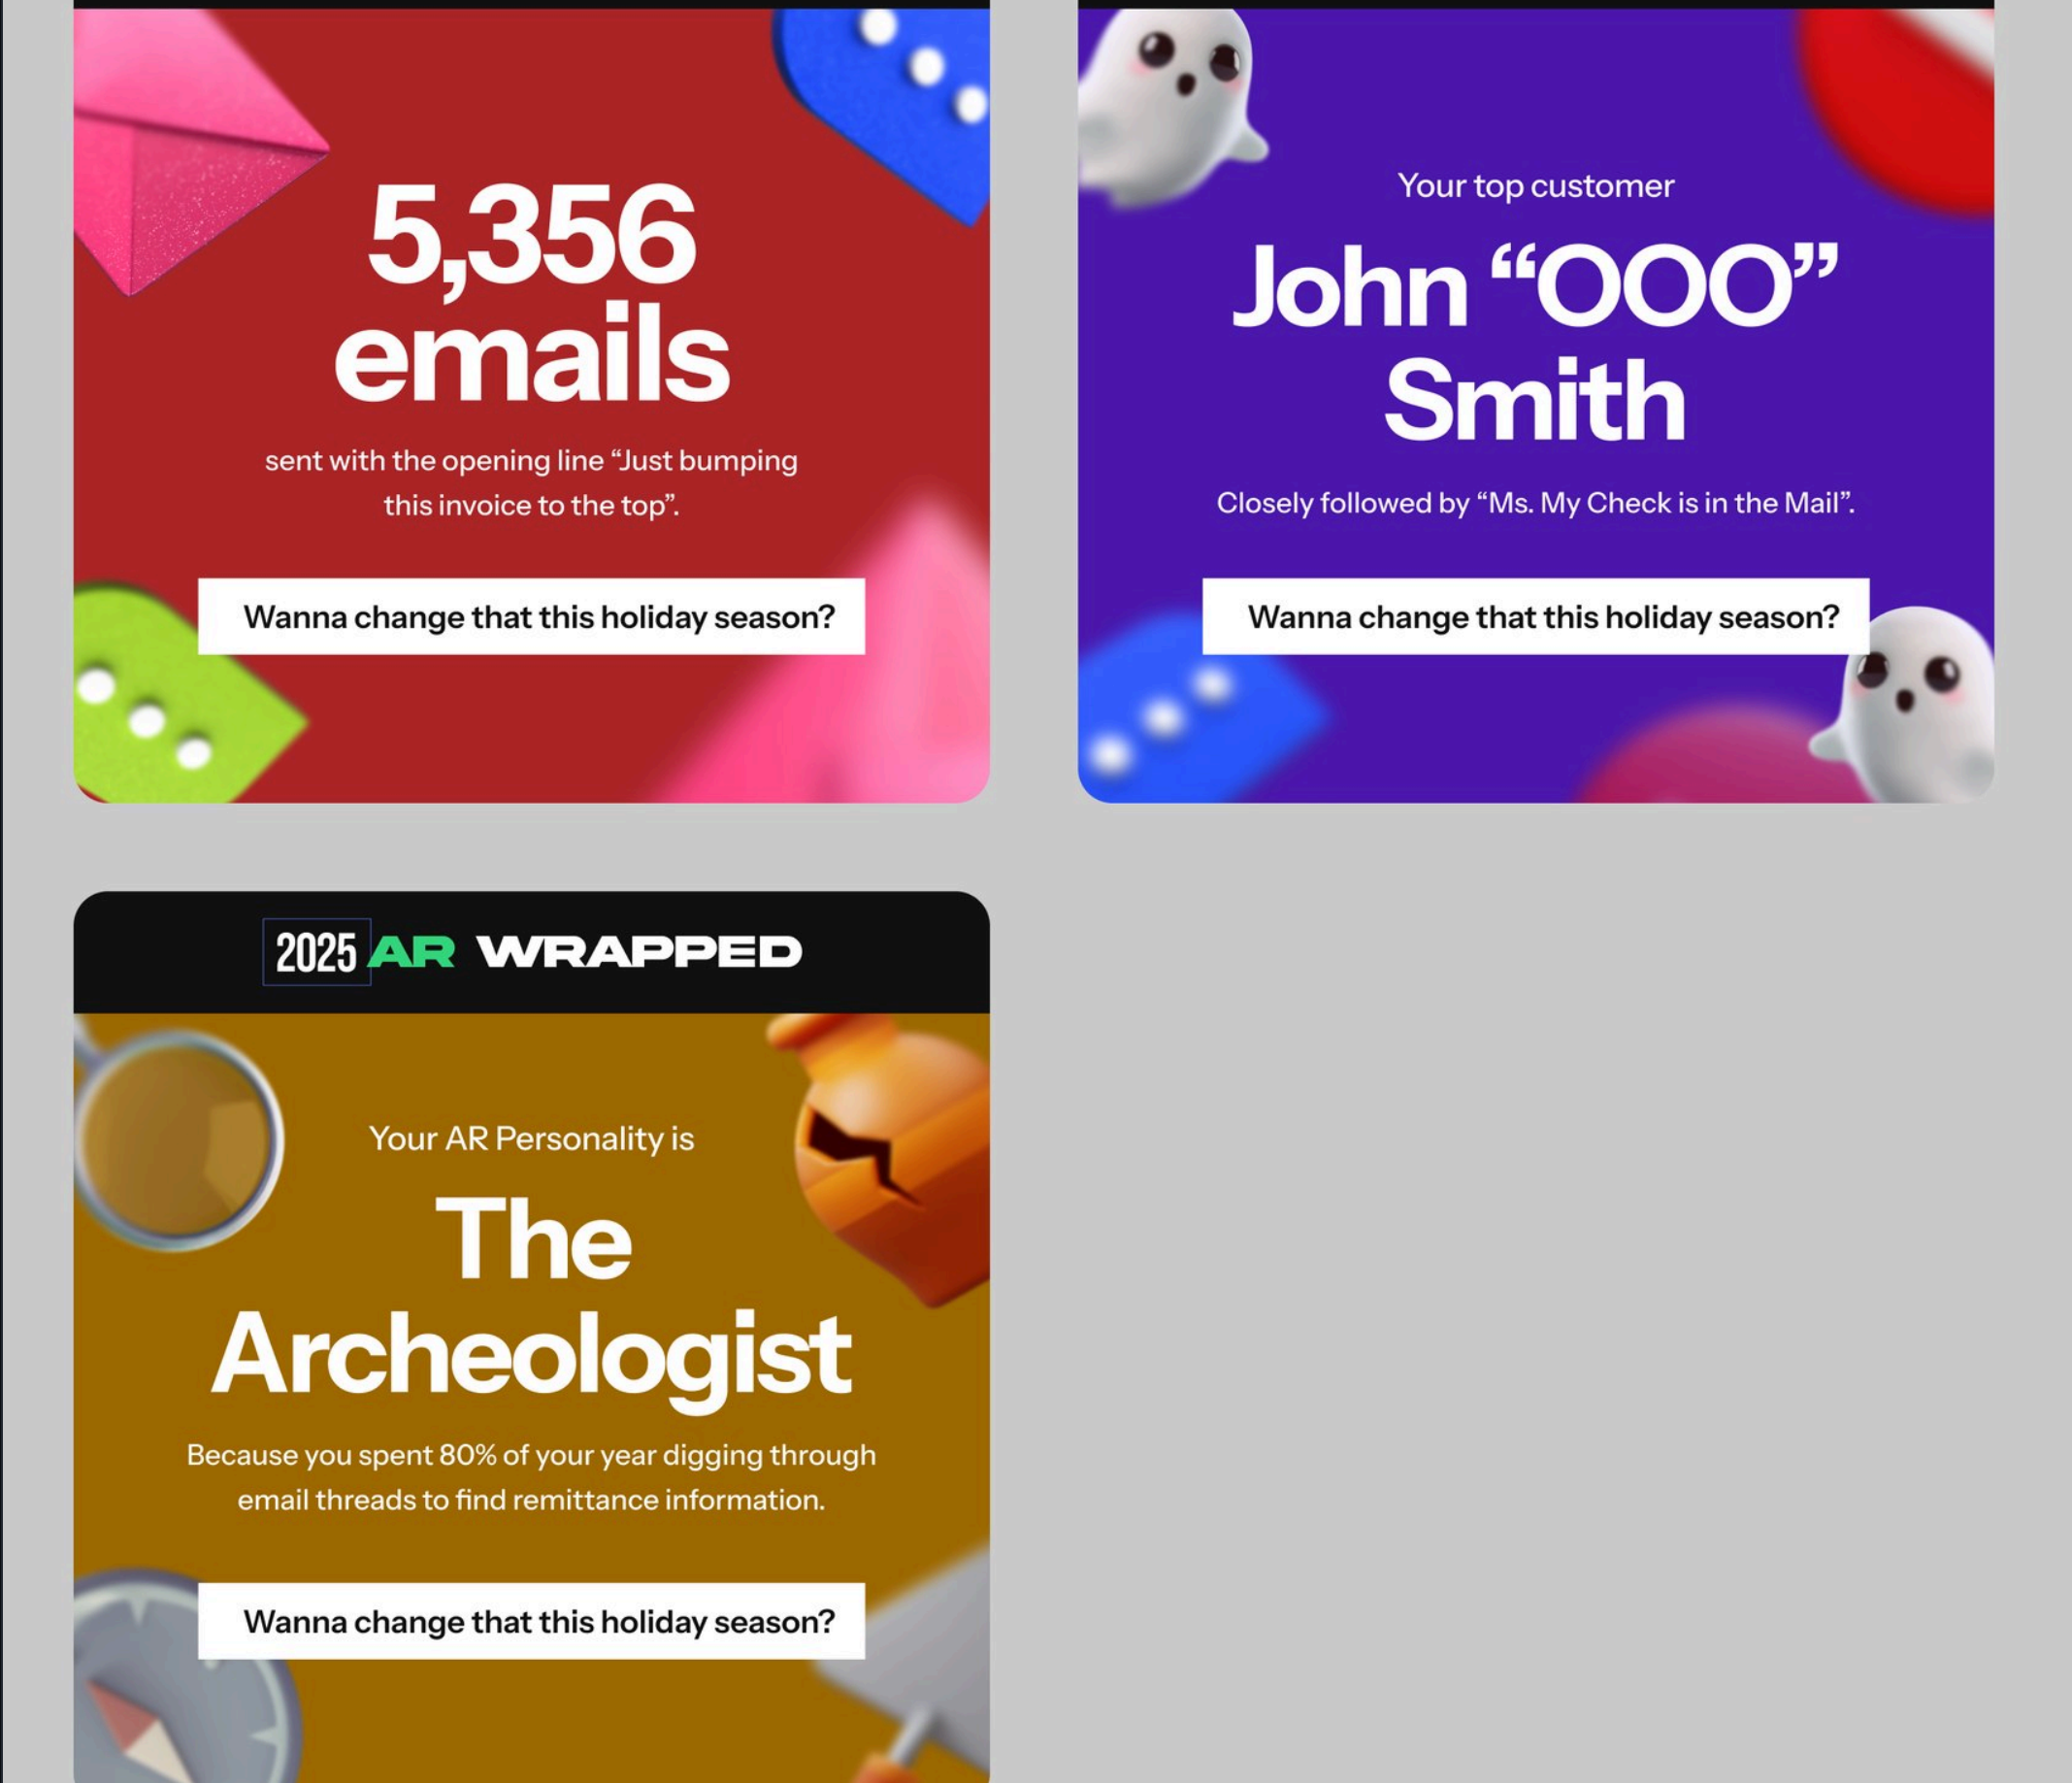

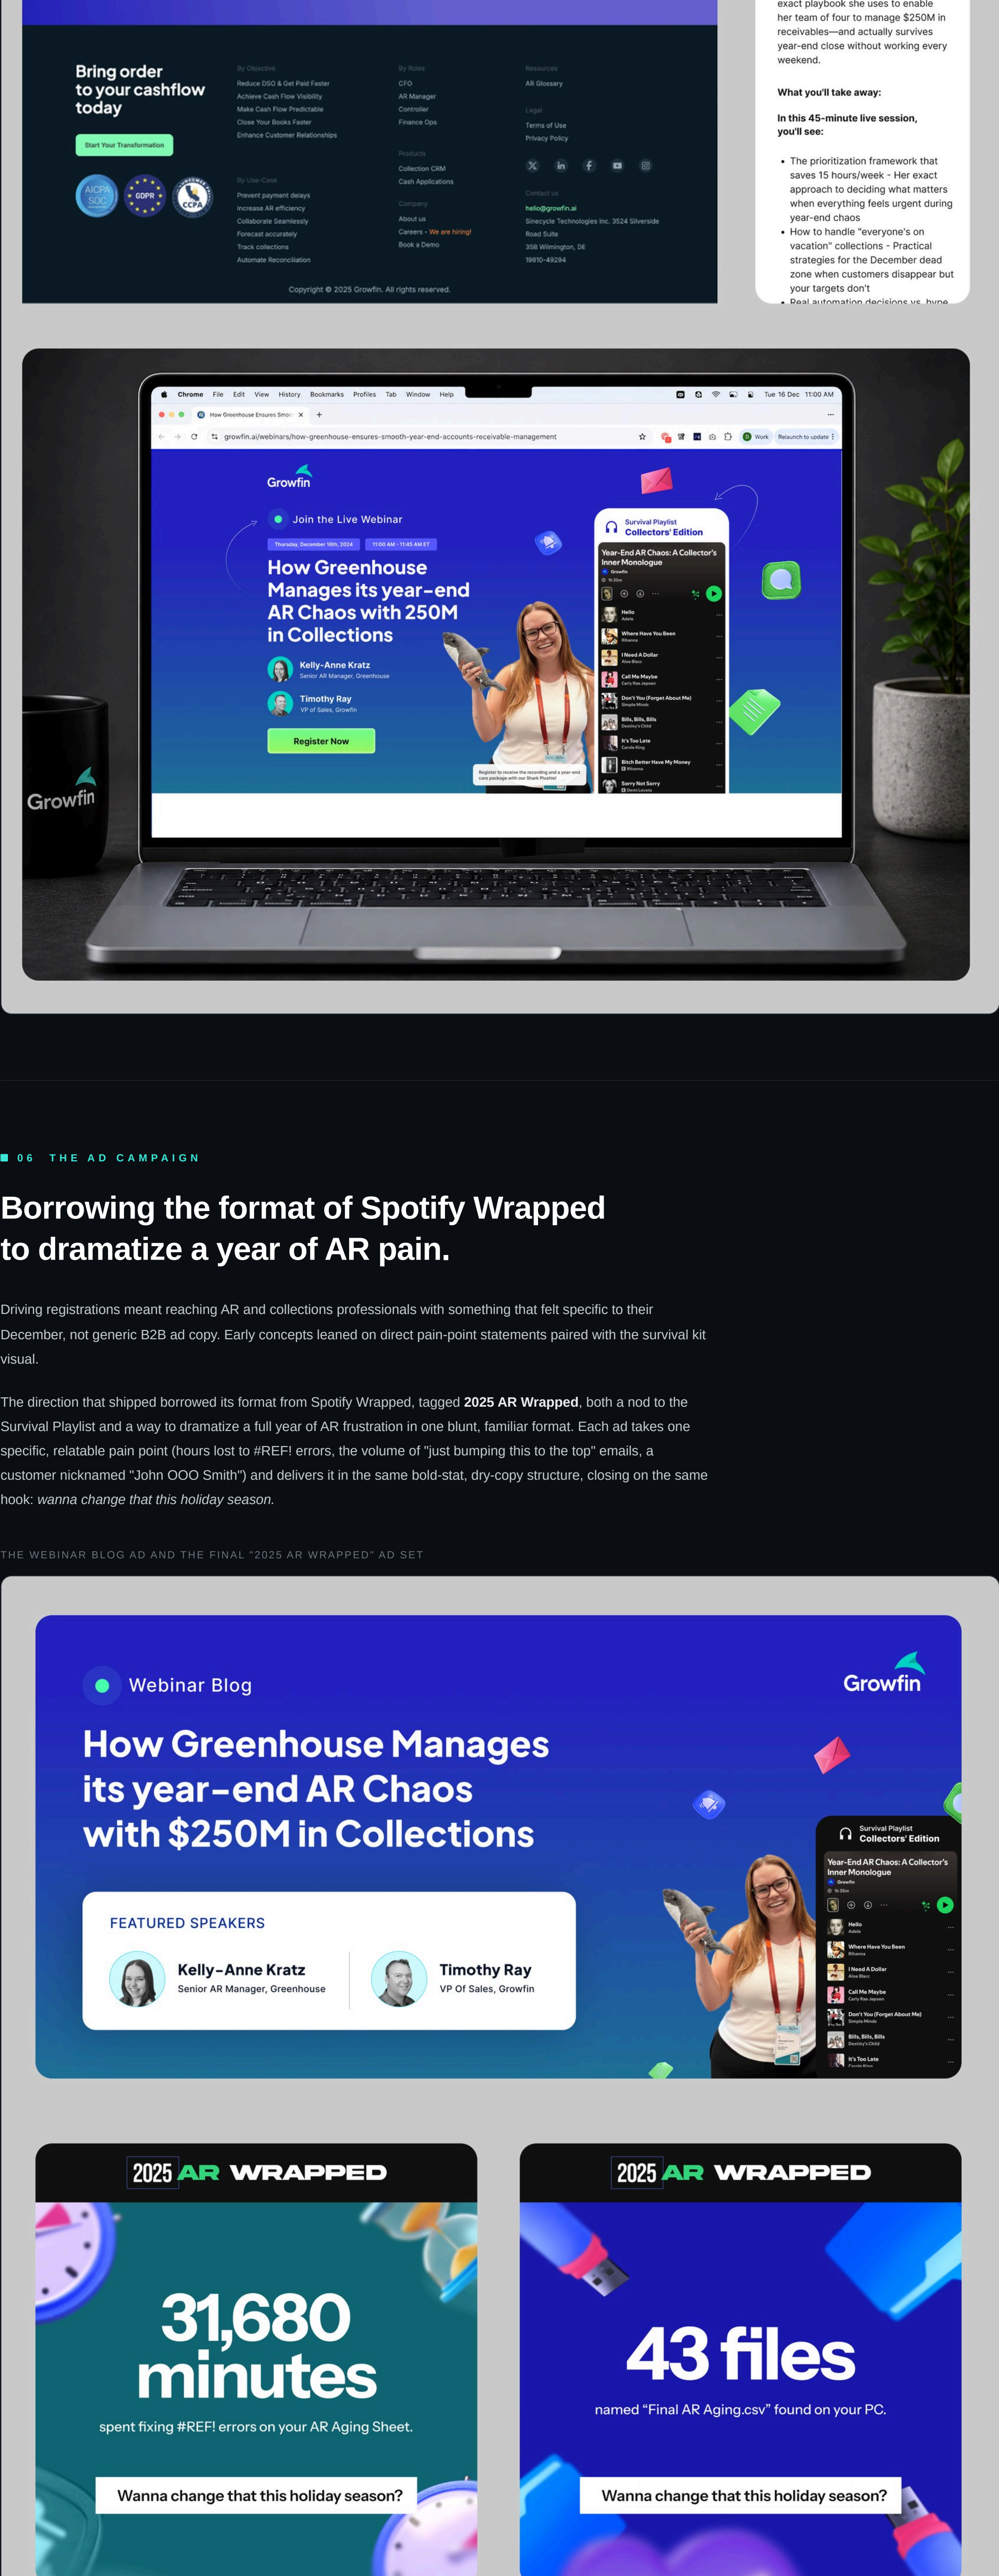

05 LANDING PAGE

The full concept, in one view.

The landing page carries the full concept in one view: the webinar invite and speaker details up top, the Survival Playlist shown as a live Spotify embed, and a clear explanation of the care package tied to registration.

Below the fold, the page shifts into the actual value of the session: a breakdown of what attendees will walk away with, paired with a registration form. Customer logos and testimonials reinforce credibility further down the page.

DESKTOP, MOBILE, AND IN-CONTEXT VIEWS OF THE WEBINAR LANDING PAGE.

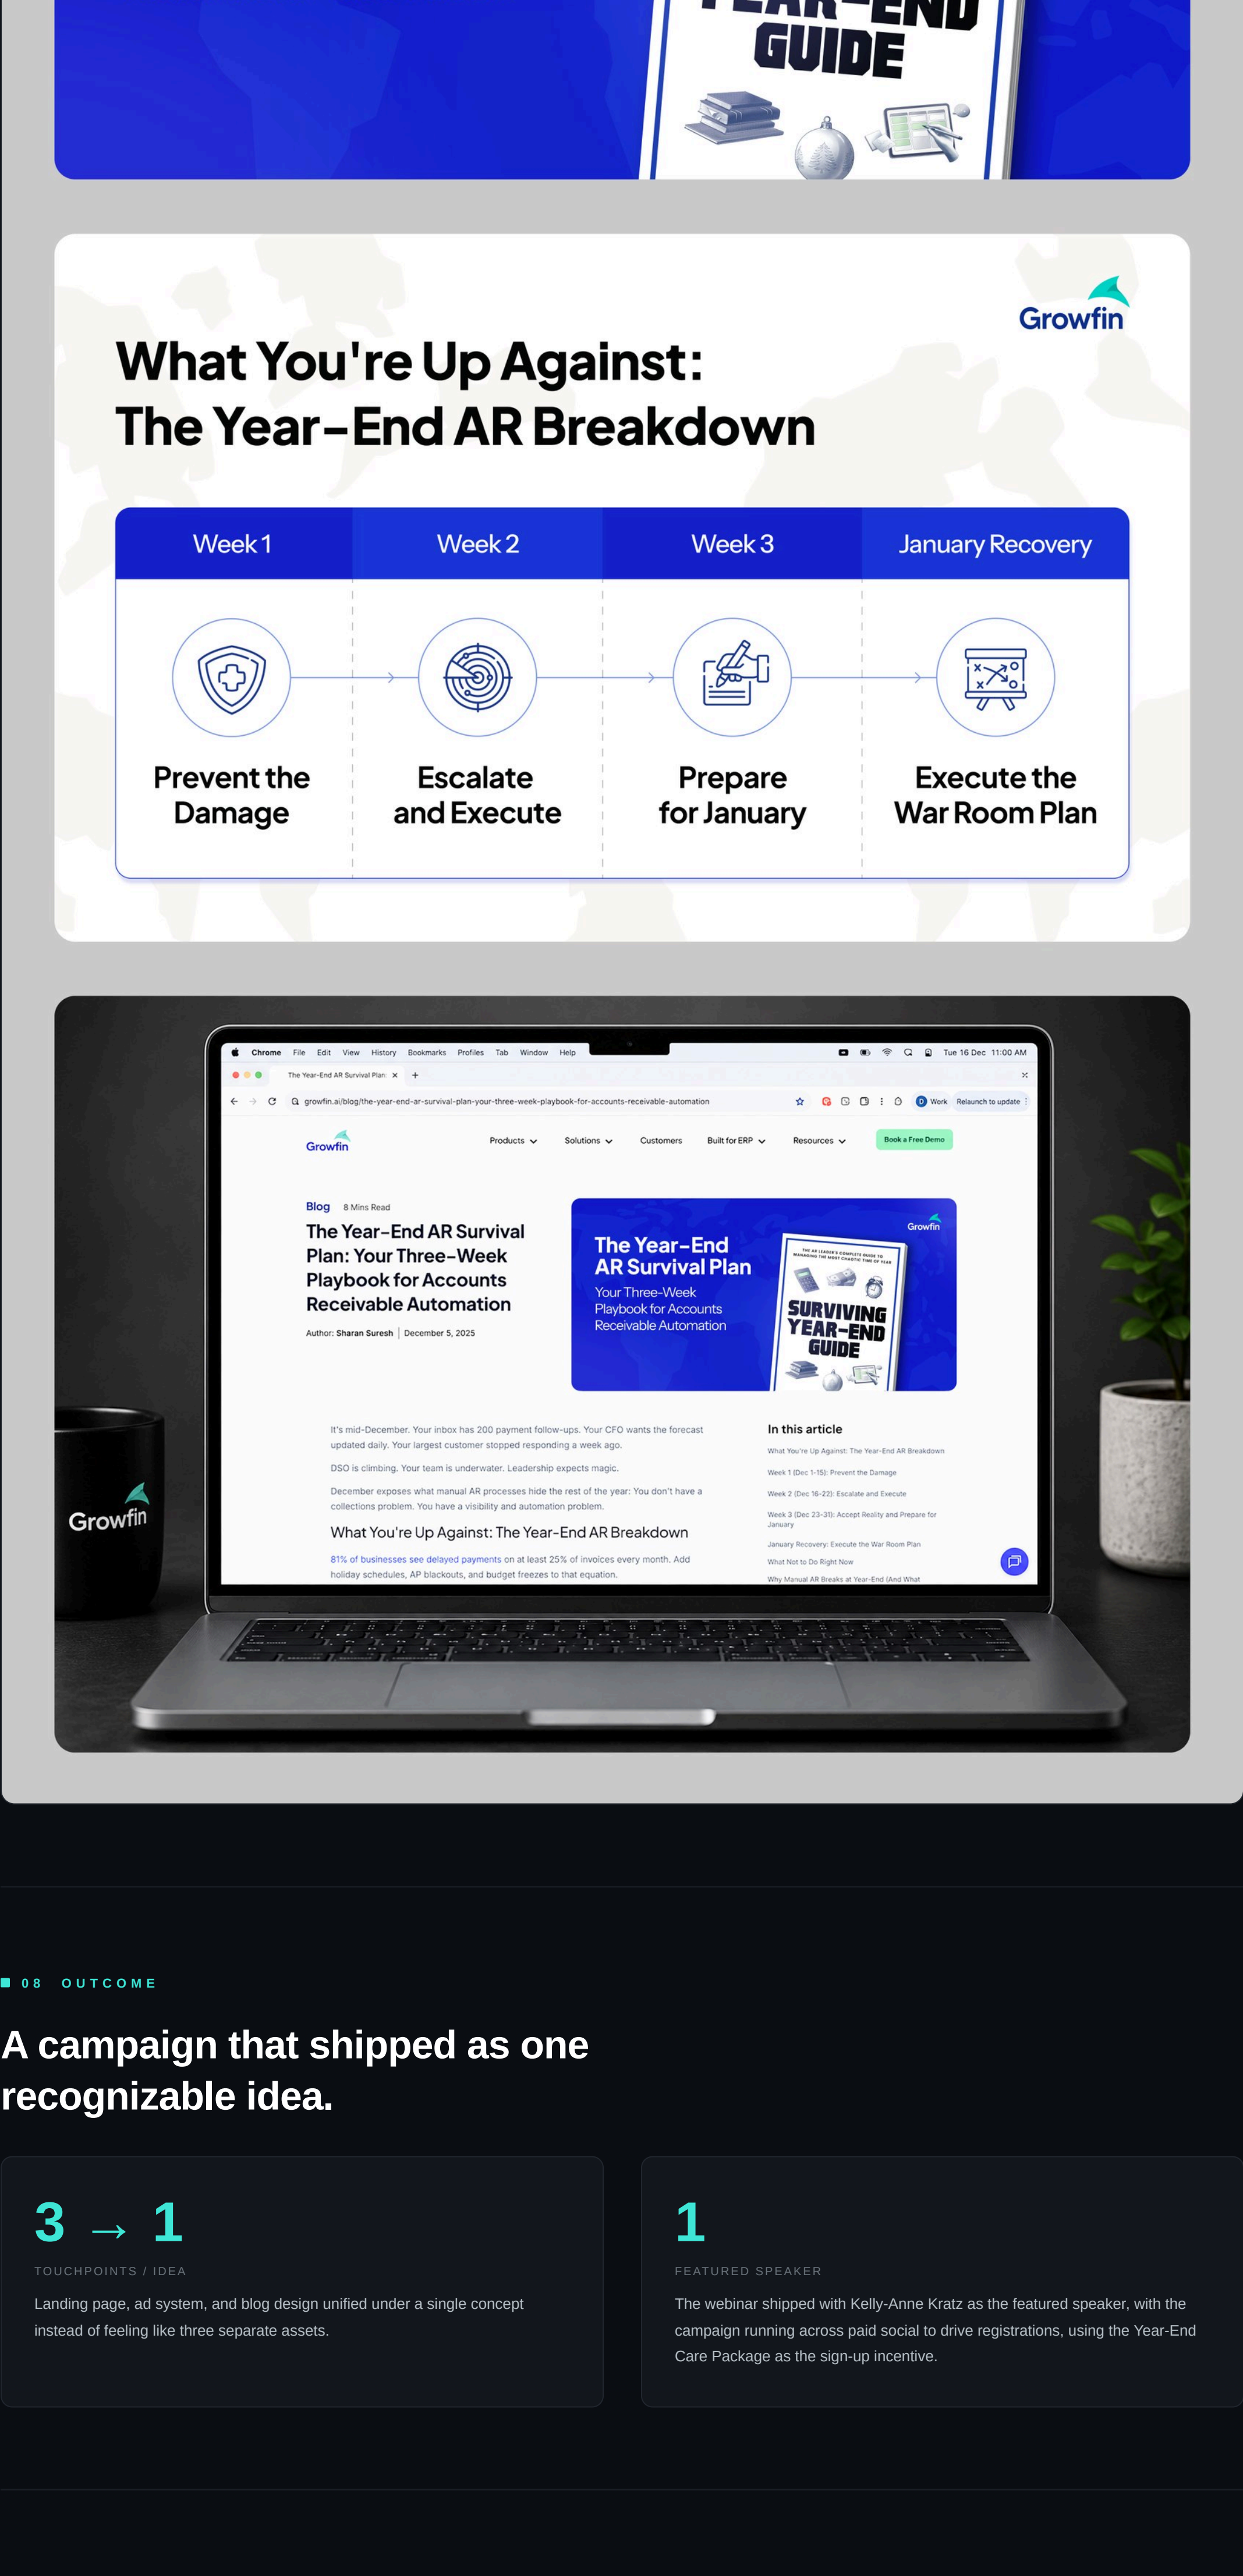

06 THE AD CAMPAIGN

Borrowing the format of Spotify Wrapped to dramatize a year of AR pain.

Driving registrations meant reaching AR and collections professionals with something that felt specific to their December, not generic B2B ad copy. Early concepts leaned on direct pain-point statements paired with the survival kit visual.

The direction that shipped borrowed its format from Spotify Wrapped, tagged 2025 AR Wrapped, both a nod to the Survival Playlist and a way to dramatize a full year of AR frustration in one blunt, familiar format. Each ad takes one specific, relatable pain point (hours lost to #REF! errors, the volume of "just bumping this to the top" emails, a customer nicknamed "John OOO Smith") and delivers it in the same bold-stat, dry-copy structure, closing on the same hook: wanna change that this holiday season?

THE WEBINAR BLOG AD AND THE FINAL "2025 AR WRAPPED" AD SET

07 BLOG DESIGN

One continuous idea, from ad to landing page to blog.

The blog post, The Year-End AR Survival Plan, is structured as a three-week tactical playbook. The cover and supporting collateral for the post carry the same visual language as the landing page and ad campaign, so the whole funnel, from ad to landing page to blog, felt like one continuous idea rather than three separate assets.

BLOG COVER, BREAKDOWN MODULE, AND IN-CONTEXT VIEW OF THE PUBLISHED POST

08 OUTCOME

A campaign that shipped as one recognizable idea.

3 → 1
TOUCHPOINTS / IDEA

Landing page, ad system, and blog design unified under a single concept instead of feeling like three separate assets.

1
FEATURED SPEAKER

The webinar shipped with Kelly-Anne Kratz as the featured speaker, with the campaign running across paid social to drive registrations, using the Year-End Care Package as the sign-up incentive.

09 REFLECTION

WHY THIS PROJECT

This project is a great example of what design contributes when the strategy is already set: marketing defined the emotional insight and the mechanism, and design's job was making that idea feel cohesive and inevitable across a landing page, an ad system, and a blog, so someone encountering any single piece of it would immediately recognize the whole campaign.